The Causes of the Battle of Wounded Knee

The Battle of Wounded Knee was the culmination of a series of events that began in the late 1880s. At that time, the Lakota Sioux were living on the Great Plains of the United States. They had been promised land and resources by the U.S. government, but these promises were not being fulfilled. The Lakota Sioux were also facing pressure from white settlers who were moving into their territory.

In response to these challenges, the Lakota Sioux began to practice the Ghost Dance. The Ghost Dance was a religious movement that promised to restore the old ways of life and to drive the white settlers out of their territory. The U.S. government saw the Ghost Dance as a threat, and they ordered the Lakota Sioux to stop practicing it.

The Lakota Sioux refused to stop practicing the Ghost Dance, and tensions between them and the U.S. government escalated. In December 1890, the U.S. Army was sent to the Lakota Sioux reservation to force them to comply.
